Keewatin and Sky Harvest Increase
Size of Proposed Windfarm

Keewatin Windpower Corp. (OTCBB: KWPW), Vancouver, B.C., is pleased to announce that Sky Harvest Windpower Corp. has installed additional meteorological study equipment on Crown land adjacent to the Keewatin property of interest. The equipment will enable Keewatin and Sky Harvest to increase the size of the proposed project from 50 MW of capacity to over 150 MW.

Keewatin played the lead role in negotiating the terms of an agreement to use the Crown land and also has acquired and reserved the funds for all pre-development work on the site.

In March 2007, Keewatin Windpower Corp. announced that it had entered into an agreement with Sky Harvest Windpower Corp., a private Canadian company, whereby Keewatin will acquire all of its issued and outstanding share capital.

A 60 meter MET (meteorological study tower) and Sodar (Sonic detection and ranging) have been installed at the site, referred to as the Matador. Mr. Craddock, C.E.O of Keewatin, says “we know the estimated yields of the resource from our MET four miles east. This deployment will allow us to propose a much larger project by correlating data between the two study areas.”

Mr. Craddock adds “Sodar allows us to evaluate wind shear, basically, the speed of winds at multiple higher levels. Tower height and even selection of turbine type require this valuable method of data procurement.”

With the increase in size of this project, Matador, and the Sky Harvest project west of Birsay, the two companies are poised to develop over 300 MW of wind power in the southwest of Saskatchewan.

Keewatin Windpower Corp. is committed to the development of windpower in areas of high quality resource potential with minimal impact on both the environment and residents of the area.
